BLISS MAKES REPLY TO SHACKELFORD'S CHALLENGE

DISCUSSES THE ANONYMOUS PAMPHLET AND AGREES TO A JOINT DEBATE WITH CANDIDATE SHINE.

Editor Pensacola Journal:

I note Mr. Cade E. Shackelford asks me some questions and issues a challenge through the columns of the Journal of Sunday. As Mr. Shackelford has exhibited manhood enough to put his name to his article I will reply.

Mr. Shackelford seems to take issue with what I said in my Army hall address in regard to the lying pamphlet, which was gotten up by non-union men, published behind barred doors and screened windows on a Sunday, for the sole and only purpose of attacking me on my labor record, not because they had any particular love for labor, not because they wanted to do anything for labor, but because they wanted to hold on to public office and fatten at the public crib for a few more years.

I have insisted and still insist that the labor question is not an issue in our campaign, although men who are not laboring men and who have little sympathy with organized labor have made long and frantic efforts to make it appear otherwise. The question before the people is: "DO WE WANT TO BECOME A LIVE AND PROGRESSIVE CITY? If so, we must have a new water works, sewers and paved streets. That is a certainty. The matter for the people to decide is whether they can get these things by voting for a man who has advocated them vigorously for years and who before the people with them as his platform, or can they get them quicker by voting for a man whose environment and whose main supporters are opposed to these things, although he adopted the municipal platform for political purposes some weeks after his nomination. It would be just as consistent for Mr. Shackelford to challenge me to discuss "cucumbers" and "cabbages" as it is to discuss this matter, for none of them have anything to do with the issues of the campaign.

Why Discuss a Lie?
But, for the sake of argument, that scheming politicians have forced the labor question into the campaign, what is the use of discussing a lie that is a lie on the face of it? The title on the cover of the pamphlet reads: "Bliss on Labor and Laboring Men. Some of Bliss' sayings from Bliss' Magazine of January, 1902." I produced in the Army hall meeting a copy of the Bliss Magazine of that date and proved that it had no such title. The magazine of that date was entitled: "Labor Strikes and Their Effects on Society, a common sense discussion of the rights and relations of capital and labor, containing ten specific reasons why strikes should be abolished and suggesting a better method of settling labor troubles."

Anyone who has intelligence enough to think will readily see there is a vast difference between these two publications. One was gotten up by a union man in the interest of labor and society in general, while the other was gotten up by a politician for a political purpose.

After I had shown the pamphlet to be a lie on the face of it at the Army hall meeting I turned to page 12 and stated that nearly one-half of page 12 and all of pages 13, 14, 15 and 16 were not contained in the Bliss magazine of January, 1902, and agreed to eat the book if they would find it there. That proposition is still open, but as the meeting has adjourned I will state there is no possibility of humiliation when I say that if Mr. Shackelford, or anyone else, will find those several pages in my magazine of that date I will strike. I do not eat the book in the presence of the so-called "Good Government League" which was organized some weeks ago in a negro dance hall and is composed to-day largely of politicians, their allies and the politically organized negroes of the city. These several pages are not contained in my magazine and Mr. Shackelford knows it, and so do all the rest of them, but the front cover says they were "from" it, and no doubt they are so far "from" it that they never had the remotest connection with it, except through the conglomeration styling itself the "Good Government League."

Mr. Shackelford complains that I did not tell the audience that pages 13, 14 and 16 of the pamphlet were preceded by the following heading: "Some extracts from Bliss in a labor paper called 'Common Sense,' published in Birmingham in 1902." I had fully intended to do so but the intense heat of the hall caused me to cut the matter short. But how about page 13 that was not preceded by the heading and were not in the book on strikes? Why does not Mr. Shackelford quote the whole matter? Fortunately there was a shorthand reporter present and the exact statement is a matter of record. I turned to page 12 and stated nearly one-half of page 12, etc., were not in the book on strikes. Why does Mr. Shackelford fail to mention pages 12 and 13. Is it not because he knows the book itself will disprove it and he mentions pages 14, 15 and 16 in order that certain uninformed people may be misled?

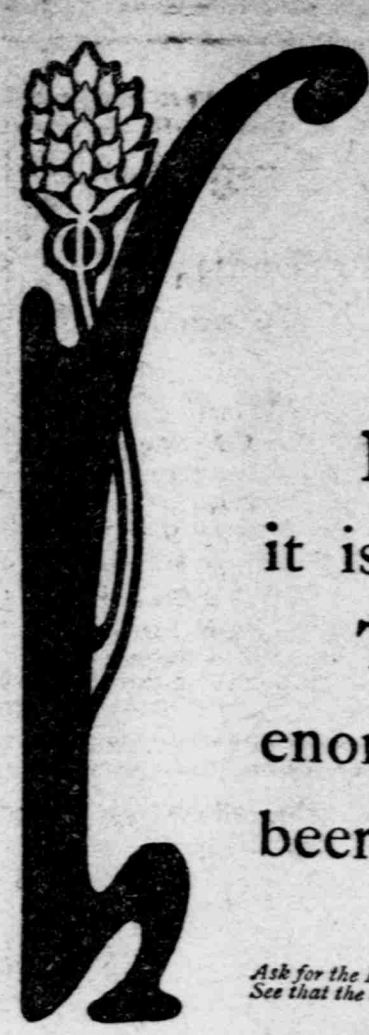

For Mr. Shackelford to Explain.
Mr. Shackelford makes this precise statement in his letter:

"I have compared this pamphlet with the book of Mr. Bliss on Labor Strikes, and the Birmingham paper of Mr. Bliss from which the extracts were taken which the pamphlet contains and I find every word therein contained to be truly and correctly quoted from the book and paper mentioned."

Now, as a matter of fact, a statement cannot be the truth and be a lie at the same time. It may be partly true and partly false but it cannot be all true and all false. Mr. Shackelford compared the pamphlet with the book and paper or else he did not compare it. He found them "truly and correctly quoted" or he found them falsely and incorrectly quoted. He states positively that he found "every word" contained in this pamphlet to be "truly and correctly quoted."

Now, as a matter of fact, about one-half of page 12 and all of page 13 in the pamphlet are not contained in my book on strikes from which it pretends to be quoted. If Mr. Shackelford made the comparison, as he says he did, he knows this for a certainty. Then when he declares it to be "truly and correctly quoted" he tells something which he positively knows to be false. If he does not know it to be false then he prevaricated when he said he had made the comparison. Mr. Shackelford is at liberty to choose either horn of the dilemma in which he has voluntarily placed himself.

On page 11 of this pamphlet is contained the following remarkable statement: "Unionism fills the jails and aims house." This, Mr. Shackelford
